A workshop with MELISSA DINWIDDIE

A full-time freelance artist and calligrapher for 15 years, Melissa Dinwiddie is now chief instigator and lead facilitator of Creative Sandbox Solutions, a creative consultancy that helps organizations future-proof their people and their plans through the strategic use of play. She also runs an online community for women, the Creative Sandbox; runs creativity retreats; is host of the podcast Live Creative Now and author of The Creative Sandbox Way: Your Path to a Full-Color Life. She lives in Mountain View with her husband and Siberian cat, Nika, and plays ukulele in her not-so-copious spare time.

(OR PEN MANIPULATION THROUGH THE BACK DOOR)

Rudolf Koch's Neuland typeface, with its heavy weight and jaunty feel, has inspired numerous calligraphic interpretations. In this class we'll learn a particularly accessible pen-made version that still retains (and maybe even surpasses) all of the character and dynamic energy of the original typeface.

Something for everyone: Even beginning students come up with great results after only one day with these letters, while more experienced calligraphers will find this alphabet an excellent way to practice your pen manipulation skills. And shhh... Don't tell anyone, but we'll all be doing some stealth pen manipulation (and paper manipulation, too) when we make these letters!

On Day One we'll focus on Melissa's "Quick and Dirty" version of Neuland, based on "secret" C- and S-curves. Then on Day Two it's off to the races (and yes, horse race metaphors are involved!) with her "Sophisticated" version of Neuland, where we really crank up our (stealth) pen manipulation skills. Along the way we will practice Melissa's Creative
